> Of the position of the three Ohio companies at the time of the affray, the same correspondent remarks:

It seems probable that the salvation of the entire three companies of Ohio troops from annibilation at Vienna, was due to the fact that the train, which took them up was followed at a short distance by another train of renchments to pursue the Ohio companies. The train below, however, consisted or empty cars, the troops brought up in them having been dropped along the road. The mistake of the movement seems to have been in not taking the full regiment up to Vienna, throwing out scouts as well, and dropping the pickets on the down trip.
